“Intranets.com allows us to collaborate with our employees worldwide,” says Wilfred Camilleri, Manager of Internet and Intranet Services for the International Information Systems Security Certification Consortium, Inc. (ISC)² ®

The International Information Systems Security Certification Consortium (ISC)² is the non-profit international leader in its 15th year of educating, qualifying and certifying information security professionals worldwide.

Since its inception in 1989, (ISC)² has trained, qualified and certified more than 27,000 information security professionals in 106 countries. (ISC)² serves governments, corporations, centers of higher learning and organizations worldwide.

“For several years now, we have been using Intranets.com and find the service very useful,” Camilleri states.

“We have staff scattered all over the world: Boston, Massachusetts, Vienna, Virginia; Palm Harbor, Florida; Montgomery, Alabama; London, and Hong Kong. We also have partners in California. (ISC)² directors, managers and administrative staff use Intranets.com’s Document Manager to manage, share and store a sizable number of documents within our global organization,” says Camilleri. “In fact, 48 staff members (is this number accurate?) are using Intranets.com as we speak.”

“We also like Intranets.com’s SSL Data Encryption Option. As a body dedicated to the use of information security, we believe it’s essential to protect the security of all of our internal documents.”

“In addition to our companywide use of the Documents Manager, our marketing and PR groups use the Intranets.com Database Manager to hold the Communications Library, the entire company uses the database for a directory, and several of our employees rely on Intranets.com’s Online Calendar every day.”

“We don’t have an IT department, per se. So, if we had to develop our own companywide intranet that offered all of the functionality that Intranets.com does, it would have been a significant personnel and financial resource drain. Intranets.com offers our employees a streamlined, beneficial solution for a great price. We’re extremely happy with the service.”
